Eduss' Revolutionary Education Software Hits the U.S. with Proven Run in 22% of Australian Schools

February 15, 2006 Education News

(PRLEAP.COM) Eduss, a leading international developer of education software, has entered the United States with its revolutionary mathematics, literacy, language and phonics software that is currently serving more than 22% of the schools and more than 14,000 homes in Australia.

The U.S. version of the software, the Eduss Integrated Multi-Dimensional Teaching Assistant (IMTA) for K-12 education, has been 2 years in the making and has been developed to meet U.S. and state education standards while employing additional best practices from around the globe. Already 80% of principals in the U.S. test market who have seen the product have adopted it into their schools. The Eduss IMTA enables a one-to-one student to teacher ratio through the automated delivery of prescriptive learning to each pupil while the teacher facilitates the child's educational path.
